Air Force/D-M ready to adjust

By 1st Lt. Rebecca Garland
355th Wing Public Affairs

The Air Force will now allow 16,600 active-duty airmen to leave the service voluntarily. This is largely through waivers of service commitments or by transferring that commitment to the Air National Guard or Air Force Reserve through the PALACE CHASE program. With the adjustments, there are many options available to interested personnel at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

The Air Force has authorized the use of certain force shaping policies in order to reach the authorized end strength of 359,700 personnel. To reach end strength requirements, approximately 16,600 additional losses must be generated by Sept. 30 than are currently projected. The plan was formally announced Jan. 29 by Gen. John Jumper, Air Force Chief of Staff, who said soaring retention and the demands of the war on terrorism have swollen the service's manpower.

D-M personnel who might be interested in exiting the service through this plan should submit their request no later than March 12 to the Military Personnel Flight. It is important, though, to understand how the process works.

"Personnel in any Air Force Specialty Code are eligible to apply for PALACE CHASE, except for personnel who have not completed initial skills training, are currently scheduled for retraining or personnel with a medical AFSC

IDEAs earn cash

Master Sgt. Christopher Gaecke, 355th Component Maintenance Squadron, earned $10,000 from the Innovative Development through Employee Awareness Award Program, the highest amount possible for an IDEA submission. His idea expands the limits allowing Jet Engine Intermediate Maintenance level replacement of six nutplates on a T-34, versus having to overhaul an exhaust frame. To replace all six nutplates it would cost $92 and five man-hours, versus overhauling the exhaust frame costing $4,651 and 40 man-hours. Sergeant Gaecke's IDEA submission was approved with a tangible savings of $196,062 in it's first year. For more information on the IDEA program, or how to submit ideas, contact Robin Perry, DAFC Management analyst, at 228-5332.

Installation stewardship

Marine volunteers save D-M $100,000

One of the base's four guiding principles is taking care of what we're given, including our work places around the base. Leaving things in better condition than when we arrived, while making sure airmen for years to come have a clean, useful and enjoyable place to work and live.

Recently four Marines from a local Reserve unit helped save D-M thousands of dollars in repairs and time and helped improve the base.

The 355th Equipment Maintenance Squadron's munitions storage facility was cited for erosion of the earthen covers on the storage igloos.

The local Marine Reserve unit volunteered to assist by quickly sending out an engineering squad to push the dirt back onto the igloos.

"The action of the Marines saved the Air Force over $100,000," said Chief Master Sgt. Douglas Wiggers, 355th EMS maintenance superintendent. In addition, the Marine Reserve unit volunteered to stay a few additional weeks to landscape the area as part of their Reservist training.

The new landscaping will vastly improve the look of the area and increase pride and morale in the munitions storage area, said Chief Wiggers. The actions of these Marines show a true inter-service success story.

In a ceremony held Feb. 3, Col. Stutzriem, 355th Wing commander, recognized the four Marines by presenting them with his coin. (Editors note: Supporting each other and working together to provide the best programs and services is a goal for all D-M people. Ideas, suggestions, comments, concerns and kudos are important to make improvements. The best way to pass along a comment or to get an answer to a concern is to contact the agency chief or functional managers listed here. The Commander's Corner phone line is 228-4747. E-mail can be sent to: 355thWing.CommandersCorner@dm.af.mil. If a concern is of general interest to the base populace, the response may be published.)

Family support center provides free financial advise, counsel to D-M

By Staff Sgt. Tammie Clark
355th Wing Public Affairs

The family support center is striving to make financial security a reality to members of the Davis-Monthan community by offering a wide array of free one-on-one financial services.

“It is important to have a healthy outlook on personal financial responsibility and to minimize debt load because of the stress debt has on our day-to-day life,” said Clay Moore, family support center work and life specialist.

“Currently, both Rhonda Hooks [FSC work and life specialist] and I provide information on the full spectrum of personal finance, from information on savings and budgeting, to investments and credit,” said Mr. Moore. “We specialize in providing budgets and spending plans to our customers.”

Mr. Moore said that when beginning to take charge of your personal financial situation, “The first step to accomplish personal financial responsibility and readiness is to establish a savings plan. The common denominator for most people with financial problems is the absence of savings for life emergencies.”

“A savings account provides a foundation for the planned and unexpected events in our lives. This foundation allows us to face what ever financial situation we find ourselves in. It’s the discipline of maintaining a savings account that will also provide a financially stable lifestyle and allow future goals to be met,” said Ms. Hooks.

The FSC recommends a savings account equal to two or three months of living expenses to be prepared for the unexpected.

It is also recommends to have enough savings to cover automobile insurance deductibles.

“Savings provides us a ‘peace of mind’ in knowing that whatever life deals us, we can financially handle it,” said Ms. Hooks.

D-M nurtures children through dental month

By Staff Sgt. Tammie Clark
355th Wing Public Affairs

In celebration of Children's Dental Health Month, members of the 355th Dental Squadron traveled to local schools teaching children the keys of dental health.

"It is important to start teaching children at a young age about good oral hygiene because it will help them start good habits early," said Staff Sgt. Danielle Smalley, 355th Dental Squadron NCO in charge of preventive dentistry. The theme of this year's Children's Dental Health Month is 'A Healthy Smile is Always in Style.'

As part of Children's Dental Health Month, the Dental Squadron traveled to Lowell Smith Elementary, Boreman Elementary and St. Joseph's Elementary to teach children about oral health, said Sergeant Smalley.

Throughout the year the Dental Squadron continues instructing children on the importance of dental care through events held at the base library, Military Kids University and other base functions.

During the briefings, Sergeant Smalley and the other members of the Dental Squadron stressed the magnitude of brushing teeth two times a day and flossing once a day.

"We also encourage children to ask their parents for help in taking care of their teeth because children often do not have the ability to properly clean their own teeth. It is important for parents to stay involved in their children's hygiene," said Sergeant Smalley.

For parents to help ensure their children have healthy teeth, Sergeant Smalley's recommendation is to visit the dentist once a year, starting with a child's first teeth coming in. In addition, ask the dentist about dental sealants and sports guards.

According the American Dental Association, parents can help their child's smile last a lifetime by providing a balanced diet, limiting snacks, ensuring daily brushing and providing regular dental checkups which are the keys to a lifetime of healthy teeth and gums.

Because starting proper dental care early is also key to healthy teeth and gums, Sergeant Smalley said, schools and youth programs are encouraged to call the dental clinic to schedule a visit from the technicians to teach youth how to take care of their teeth. For more information on children's dental health, call 228-2651.

who also possess an educational active-duty service commitment, said Capt. Sean Harrington, 355th Mission Support Squadron. Personnel released under the PALACE CHASE program may be relieved of any recoupment obligation for unearned portions of their bonus. However, recoupment is not waived for Aviator Continuation Pay."

Another option would be 'Limited Active Duty Service Commitment Waivers' said Captain Harrington. This portion of the program allows officer/enlisted personnel, in selected AFSCs, to retire or separate prior to completing specific active duty service commitments. Recoupment of unearned portions of bonuses is required under this portion of the program. The MPF and AFPC Web site have an official list of waiverable force AFSCs, as well as the maximum commitment that may be waived under the program.

The Enlisted Date of Separation Rollback program is designed for commanders to release anyone with specific reenlistment eligibility codes, and have 14 years or less of service at the time of separation. The separation date for these airmen will be equal to 120 days from commander notification of release from active duty.

"No AFSC is excluded under this portion of the program," said Captain Harrington. "We will be providing every commander with a roster identifying those airmen who fall under RE codes 2X (denied reenlistment), 4H (serving suspended punishment pursuant to Article 15) and 4I (serving on a control roster)."

The officer and enlisted retraining program is an officer retraining program under development at the Air Force Personnel Center and will be released in the near future. The Fiscal Year 2004 Non-Commissioned Officer retraining program is currently underway.

High-year tenure extensions are for the duration of FY-04 Force Shaping Program. A list of HYT AFSCs is also available from the MPF. Other enlisted separations, as outlined in AFI 36-3208, will continue to be accepted throughout the duration of the FY-04 Force Shaping Program. However, base level authority for these separations has been suspended. Approval/disapproval authority will be AFPC for all miscellaneous requests regardless of a member's AFSC or length of DOS waiver requested.

"The [MPF] is conducting weekly briefings throughout the program application window for interested personnel to discuss their options and program intricacies," said Lt. Col. Robert Labrutta, 355th Mission Support Group commander. "Briefings will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 2 p.m. in the MPF. Personnel desiring to attend these briefings must schedule themselves through the Separations and Retirements office at 228-5367 or 228-5326."

After an application is submitted, airmen should expect to hear within four to six weeks whether their application has been approved.

Maj. Gen. John Speigel, Air Force director of personnel policy at the Pentagon, said he estimates the first phase of the plan will get the Air Force roughly one-quarter of the way to the 16,600-troop goal. That means more than 4,000 personnel departing the Air Force through one of the many programs available.

"It's too early to tell how many people from D-M will submit packages," said Captain Harrington. "After the briefings and the first round of cuts, we'll have a much better idea."

For more information on the programs for D-M personnel, contact Capt. David May at the MPF at 228-5662 or Captain Harrington at 228-5668.

In addition to general financial information, members of the FSC can provide a full review of a person's financial situation.

"When individuals come in (for a complete financial review), we look at their income, daily expenses and debts in an attempt to develop a plan of action that will help the member minimize future debt. At the same time, our focus is on ensuring a member has savings to handle on-going life situations," said Mr. Moore.

Military members should bring a copy of their most recent leave and earnings statement, a complete listing of debt and have an awareness of daily spending to receive the best personalized review.

"The FSC maintains a wealth of information on virtually every financial issue to include car buying, home buying, credit, debt management and the entire suite of investment possibilities. Because all of this information is available, we can help before financial problems arise through our education process," said Mr. Moore.

Furthermore Mr. Moore said, "Military readiness is inextricably tied to financial readiness. We have an outstanding Personal Readiness program here in the center."

Base leadership is urging all commanders to personally become familiar with and encourage personnel to take advantage of the available financial services the FSC has to offer, said Mr. Moore. "Virtually every program the FSC has to offer is tied in some way to financial readiness and we encourage all personnel to take advantage of our full range of services."

The FSC offers services ranging from free calling cards to car care, as well as the Hearts Apart Program, said Mr. Moore.

"Air Force Aid is also available if the need arises. These programs are free and we encourage deploying personnel to use these programs to decrease out of pocket expenditures. We also encourage members to establish a budget prior to deployment," said Mr. Moore.

"Those deploying must plan because there are essentially two households where needs must be met," said Ms. Hooks. "A spending plan will help avoid overspending and also overdrawn checking accounts. Plus, if they are expecting any special pay it is best to have a plan for the money, as opposed to carelessly spending it."

"Our services are available to active duty, retired and family members. Time permitting, we also provide services to civilian personnel," said Mr. Moore.

For more information or to schedule an appointment for one-on-one financial assistance, call 228-5690.

Motion Sensor Update

Major Electric will continue the year-long process of installing motion sensor lights on selected units of base housing. These lights will be installed on the carport and rear patio areas and are intended to increase the safety and security of base homes. The goal is to cause as little disruption as possible. Base housing residents will be notified seven days before the scheduled installation date. The contractor needs approximately 30 to 45 minutes of access to the interior of the home near the rear patio door and no more than two to three hours for the entire installation. Someone over the age of 18 must be present during the installation process.

This is a mandatory appointment. All missed appointments may be reported to your first sergeant.

For extenuating circumstances, if you are unable to provide the contractor access on the scheduled date, notify the contractor at 746-0300. If you have any questions, contact Yvonne Brabham, base housing facility chief, at 228-4264, 355th Civil Engineering customer service at 228-3171 or Tech. Sgt. Brian Swanson, 355th CES base inspector, at 228-5175.

ACC demo teams to roar by D-M's flightline

By 355th Wing Public Affairs

Davis-Monthan Air Force Base will host the 2004 Heritage Conference March 5 through 7. The conference is open to all military members and personnel with military IDs. A wide variety of aircraft will be featured during the weekend including the A-10 demo team, F-15 West and East Coast Demo Teams, many distinguished civilian pilots and more.

The F-15 West and East Coast Demo Teams are just two of the six single aircraft demonstration teams assigned to Air Combat Command. The teams are each comprised of one demo pilot, nine maintenance personnel and four flight safety officers. The aircraft themselves are not assigned to either team. The West Coast aircraft are operational fighters from the 33rd Fighter Wing at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and the East Coast aircraft are operational fighters from the 1st Fighter Wing at Langley Air Force Base, Va.

The U.S. Air Force's Air Combat Command single-ship demonstration teams perform precision aerial maneuvers, demonstrating to the public the unique capabilities of the Air Force's high performance aircraft. Air Combat Command's single-ship demonstration team members also exhibit the professional qualities the Air Force develops in the people who fly, maintain and support these aircraft.

The aircraft flown during the aerial demonstration are fully combat capable and would immediately deploy to war if called upon to do so. Additionally, all team members remain current in their wartime duties and are immediately deployable in the event of conflict. Their primary mission is to promote Air Force recruiting, retention and community relations through better understanding of the Air Force and its mission.

The F-15 Eagle is an all-weather, extremely maneuverable, tactical fighter designed to gain and maintain air superiority in aerial combat. A multi-mission avionics system sets the F-15 apart from other fighter aircraft. It includes a head-up display, advanced radar, inertial navigation system, flight instruments, UHF communications, tactical navigation system and instrument landing system. It also has an internally mounted, tactical electronic-warfare system, "identification friend or foe" system, electronic countermeasures set and a central digital computer.

Captain Bret Anderson, pilot for the F-15 East Coast Demonstration Team is responsible for representing ACC, the United States Air Force and the Department of Defense at more than 30 air shows annually. With more than 1,700 flight hours, 241 combat hours and experience flying six different types of aircraft, Captain Anderson will be on hand to demonstrate the capabilities of the F-15 and to prepare for the upcoming air show season.

Captain Joel Hemphill is ACC's F-15 West Coast Demonstration

Team pilot, and officer in charge of the team. He is responsible for showcasing America's F-15C to more than seven-million people at more than 65 shows around the world so far. Captain Hemphill has more than 1200 flight hours, 130 combat hours and experience flying six different aircraft, and will also be in Tucson displaying the capabilities of the F-15 during the Heritage Conference.

For Captains Anderson and Hemphill, the Heritage Conference is a time to train with the rest of the demo teams for the upcoming season, as well as harness their skills as pilots, patriots and airmen.

Drugs end airman's career, leads to jail

By Senior Airman Nicholasa Reed
Air Armament Center Public Affairs

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — “No matter what kind of person you are, drugs will ruin you,” said an obviously uneasy, 21-year-old Airman Basic Michael Dancer as he nervously turned his wedding band.

Wearing a blue correctional custody jump suit, Airman

Michael spoke from experience. Though he was not caught driving under the influence, buying or distributing, he was turned in by Airman 1st Class Dacia Dancer, his wife.

“I love him, I just didn’t like what he was doing. I did what I had to, to get him help,” Airman Dacia said.

Airman Michael entered the Air Force in March 2001 and seemed to be off to a good start. He won airman of the quarter for his squadron and was a member of the base honor guard for eight months.

Having performed 45 details, Airman Michael was even eligible for an achievement medal. That is why many of his friends, family and colleagues were shocked when they found out about his addiction to cocaine.

“Airman Michael was highly involved in school and sports, and he had good grades. He was not a troubled youth,” said Senior Master Sgt. Michelle Lopez, 96th Logistics Readiness Squadron first sergeant and a former substance abuse counselor. “He was one of the top troops, extremely proper with his customs and courtesies and impeccable uniforms."

Drugs

After serving in the Air Force for one year and nine months, Airman Michael began socializing with a civilian friend who had a history of drug use. In December 2002, Airman Michael and his friend began to use cocaine.

"The night he first tried cocaine, he had been drinking, which brought his inhibitions down," Sergeant Lopez said. "He went straight from alcohol to intravenous drug use."

That is not typical of a first-time user. Most first-time drug users do not go straight to the needle, but start with a gateway drug, Sergeant Lopez said.

A month later Airman Dacia began to have suspicions about her husband's activities. One day she came home in the middle of her shift and found Airman Michael with dilated eyes and acting oddly. Then she found drugs in his pants pocket. Airman Dacia said she entered the military to get away from a past run-in with drugs and was infuriated with her husband's decision to bring drugs into their lives.

"I told her I would stop," Airman Michael said. But he found the addiction made it hard for him to keep that promise.

In March, Airman Dacia caught her husband using drugs again. Fed up, she called the police. Airman Michael left the house, but minutes later returned home.

"I wanted to get help," he said. "I saw what I was putting her through and knew I needed to get help."

When the police arrived at the Dancer home, they believed they were responding to a domestic dispute and separated the couple. Airman Dacia told the police that her husband had been using drugs and Airman Michael confessed to the crime.

Airman Michael took immediate responsibility for his actions, Sergeant Lopez said.

"My supervisor picked me up and we met my first sergeant at the hospital for a urinalysis, then went to the security forces squadron to make a statement," Airman Michael said.

"My first sergeant was really supportive and still is," he said. "Really, everyone has been supportive (including) my wife, her parents and my parents."

"I give a lot of credit to Dacia," Sergeant Lopez said. "She decided early on that if he was willing to get help they would stay together, but they would need counseling."

Through the help of the alcohol and drug abuse prevention and treatment program in life skills, the Dancers have received family counseling to get through this time with Airman Michael remaining in correctional custody.

During a special court-martial by a judge alone, Airman Michael was sentenced to six months confinement, forfeiture of pay and a bad conduct discharge.

Of all of his regrets, Airman Michael said he hated that this habit had affected his wife.

"She could have walked off whenever she wanted to, but she decided to stay and work through the pain," Airman Michael said. "I respect her even more for that."

The message Airman Michael's situation highlights for Sergeant Lopez is the effect his behavior will have on his future.

"A bad conduct discharge results in a felony conviction. That means he is not allowed to carry a firearm or vote," she said. "Those are rights, as American citizens, we take for granted."

Almost two years after Airman Michael's first encounter with illegal drugs, his military career is over, there is a new strain on his marriage and he has a felony conviction that will last him the rest of his life.

"My message to others is that no matter who you are, drugs will ruin you. It's as simple as that," Airman Michael said.

For more information about drug abuse call the Davis-Monthan Medical Group at 228-5507.
